The Empire State Building has an important place in history as a true accomplishment of American ingenuity and has earned its place among New York City's skyline. Every building must adapt to current times, and the Empire State Building is not excluded. In transitioning to a building for those of an advanced age, the program is formed within a spectrum of spaces. The program of these spaces becomes dream-like opportunities for people of all ages to experience. The intersections of these voids become spatial portals/rooms where the program becomes meshed into one unique space. The voids are oriented toward the city and sky and provide a juxtaposition with the unique program that the spaces contain. These spaces are public spaces that provide day/night communal activities. The program attracts visitors and residents to interact with one another.
A Spectrum for All Ages
SOCIAL CONNECTIONS
EVENTS AND RETAIL PULL PASSENGERS INTO THE BUILDING TO INTERACT WITH RESIDENTS